

A word from the County Executive

Suffolk County's Displaced Homemaker Program has been remarkably successful in helping people get back on the road to personal and economic independence.

While many stumbling blocks face a person entering or re-entering the job market, a displaced homemaker must confront even greater challenges.

The Displaced Homemaker Center at the Suffolk County Department of Labor was specifically designed to help you deal with those challenges.

Individual counseling, financial and legal advice, education and skills training, job search assistance and job placement are just some of the services offered that can help you get back on your feet again.

Steve Levy

A word from the Commissioner

In recent years, an ever-increasing number of individuals trying to break into the job market have been displaced homemakers. The Displaced Homemaker Center can help make your transition from homemaker to "breadwinner" less stressful.

Whether you need help identifying your marketable skills, re-inflating your self-worth or simply a nudge in career direction, we are here.

We have helped thousands smoothly sail over the rough seas you now face. Our services are free and absolutely confidential.
